

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A method enables determination of a prognosis for an external body condition of a subject. The method may involve receipt of one or more representations of the subject's external body condition. A prognosis may be generated based on both the representation and database information relating to how use of at least one beauty product affects evolution of the external body condition. The prognosis may then be outputted to enable the subject to receive the prognosis.